

Suppose our true selves are #39;higher#39; selves of another dimension or other levels of energy, and playing the game of life in these dimensions through temporary selves via reincarnation? Has any transhumanist ever meditated and found they were that higher self, that their presumed human identity was no their real self? The convergences you describe

But then what is time to you? Is immortality boring? What is there to achieve if everything is at your whim? What will you do? Who are you then? PS: that wasn#39;t a made up experience, it was real and I honestly don#39;t know those answers, or even pres
